TIE PLANT MATTER TALKED AT MEETING

Citizens Hold Mass Meeting Monday to Discuss Matter of Alleged Pollution of Streams by Ayer & Lord. Adopt Resolutions Expressing Friendship for Tie Plant.

Pursuant to action taken by the Young Men's Business Club at its meeting last Friday, a mass meeting was held in the courthouse in Grenada at ten o'clock Monday morning. The meeting was called as a result of the recent order passed by the board of supervisors giving the Ayer & Lord Tie Co., three miles south of Grenada, six months' time to stop the alleged drainage of creosote and other waste from its plant into Bogue Creek and thence into Yalobusha River. The order referred to was published in last week's issue of The Sentinel and was passed following complaint of various citizens that creosote from Tie Plant was polluting the streams of the county and killing the fish and making the water unfit for stock to drink.

Mayor W. S. P. Doty presided over the Monday mass meeting. He briefly stated the purpose of the gathering and stated that he believed the supervisors, the citizens and the Tie Plant officials could settle the matter amicably by getting together and trying to work out some plan whereby the company's waste matter would not enter the streams. He pointed out the economic advantages accruing to Grenada and this section by virtue of the plant being located here through the enormous sum expended annually for labor and materials and he called attention to the fact that the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. is the second largest taxpayer in the county and that every school child in the county received direct benefit from these taxes and from the taxes paid by Ayer & Lord employees.

Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, discussed the advantages of the plant to this section and he discussed, also, the possibility of other things besides creosote killing the fish in the river. He mentioned fish dying by the hundreds at other places where there was no creosoting plant. He suggested that a careful investigation be made before the killing of fish be laid at the door of the Ayer & Lord Tie Co.

The chairman called on the supervisors, all of whom were present, to say something and Kemp Mattingly, supervisor from district 1, stated that he had voted against the order passed by the board, referred to above. He stated that he thought it would be a good idea to accept the company's offer to defray a part of the expense of making a scientific investigation to determine whether or not the creosote is doing all the damage attributed to it.

W. W. Whitaker, supervisor from district 5, stated that it was his belief that the county could have the fish and the tie plant, too, as he believed the company could comply with the board's order. He said that he had not heard any Ayer & Lord official say that the company could not stop the drainage of waste into Bogue and he said further that the people he represented had been complaining for 25 years about creosote killing the fish.

W. M. Dubard, who owns much land along the Yalobusha River, asked to be heard on the subject. Mr. Dubard gave it as his opinion that if the meeting went on record as favoring a scientific investigation to determine whether or not the fish are being killed by creosote, it would make itself ridiculous for he said that that fact was established long ago by thinking, sensible men who did not need a chemist to tell them.

J. F. McRee, of Holcomb, stated that he knew, too, the fish were being killed by creosote and that fish caught from the river couldn't be eaten on account of the chemical. He said that in polluting the waters the Tie Plant is violating the law and that it should be made to obey the law just as the smaller taxpayer.

A. G. Roane, attorney, denied that the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. is a law violator. To the contrary, he said, it endeavored to follow the law to the letter and he said that he knew this to be true for he had represented the company on numerous occasions. He told of the company some years ago spending a considerable sum of money in an effort to obey a similar order passed by the supervisors at that time and he said, too, that company officials were anxious to cooperate in every way with officials and citizens of the county.

J. B. Perry, president of the Grenada Oil Mills, said he felt sure the supervisors didn't wish to inflict any unjust punishment on the plant and he felt that a more careful investigation should be made. He moved the adoption of resolutions expressing the good will of the community, as expressed by the following:

MRS. N. B. SMITH DIES

Mrs. N. B. Smith, 32, died Tuesday morning at her home at Tie Plant. Funeral services were conducted the next afternoon by Rev. G. T. Sledge, pastor of the Tie Plant Methodist Church, after which interment was had in the Hebron Church burying ground, two miles east of Grenada.

Mrs. Smith was a member of the Baptist church, with which she united when a young girl. She was a woman who devoted herself mainly to the cares of the home and to ministering to the wants of her loved ones. She was a good wife, a loving and devoted mother and an obliging friend and neighbor. She was the mother of seven children, the youngest of whom is an infant born last Sunday. Her passing, therefore, is doubly distressing.

To the sorrowing husband and other loved ones, The Sentinel tenders its sincerest sympathy.

Modern Ways Appeal To Oriental Women

Minister in China Tells How Chinese Women Have Come Out of Seclusion in Recent Years and Have Adopted Ways of Modern American Flapper. Take Part in Public Affairs.

Editor Sentinel:

Here comes a letter from this land of intrigue, graft, warfare, famine, suffering, chaos, to tell you and the reader, of your excellent paper about China's new woman who has a share in the "going-on."

If a woman in China, twenty years ago, had been given a Rip Van Winkle sleep, she would be more surprised than he was, should she awake today. Then women had to stay indoors and work something like domestic animals. Or, if of a better family, be cooped up at home and stay there. She was allowed to be seen only by her husband or brothers.

Now what a change! The modern Chinese young women skip around the streets with a springy grace and freedom that's quite refreshing when one remembers the women formerly hobbling along on bound feet supported by amahs. Now girls bob, shingle, or permanent wave their hair. They ride bicycles, play tennis, basketball and engage in other athletics. Formerly the parents arranged their marriage. Now one often sees the young ladies walking very affectionately arm in arm with their "best boys," and the young people often go off arranging the dress, used to be the most modest of any nationality. Now women are often seen with short sleeves and very low-necked frocks, even at mid-day. Sometimes they're seen with the most up to date beyond the knee short frock and flimsy silk hose and very high-heeled shoes. Indeed the Chinese girls are quite amusing flappers sometimes - so much so that the officials have felt it necessary to issue proclamation, commanding them to dress modestly. The girls have even learned to flirt in the most up to date way. That's freedom! They dance in the latest style. They ride horses, astride, with boots and riding breeches. "That's English, you know."

Once the ideal for girls was that they be able to do beautiful needle-work at home. Now they are doing other things. They are clerks in stores. Some are typists and stenographers. Some are bankers. They play the organ or piano or other musical instruments. Some are becoming movie artists or actresses. Some are lawyers and judges and doctors. They even become soldiers and sometimes they become generals' secretaries! Women also become street-corner politicians and scream the Revolutionary platitudes such as, "Down with imperialism," "Give the people freedom," to beat the most zealous men Revolutionaries. Rarely do you see meetings for propaganda or riots without seeing girls or women taking active part in them, urging on the riots. I am glad to say that some few of them are taking part in the Red Cross work in relieving the suffering of those wounded in battle. Women, too, occupy places of influence in the government in Nanking. Once women's faces lacked all hope and ambition, and there are still great hosts of women who are the same drudges at home or worse—in great factories. But among the younger generation they have ambition—ambition that carries them to extremes.

I'm glad to say that there are many modest, motherly women who have gone through our mission schools who are making nice, clean, beautiful Christian homes where the children are brought up well and taught to be good useful members of society, children of whom they and missions can be proud and thankful. One can not expect great things from a nation in which the people have been brought up for ages in filth, physical and moral; but a new genera-

BUSINESS CLUB SPONSORS MONDAY'S MASS MEETING

At the meeting of the Young Men's Business Club last Friday at noon a committee from the Rotary Club appeared to bring up for discussion the matter of the Tie Plant and creosote in local streams. The committee consisted of B. C. Adams, R. C. Trusty and J. T. Keeton. The question was thoroughly discussed and it was voted to call a mass meeting at the court house Monday. It was the sense of the club that some action should be taken in the hope that the board of supervisors would rescind its order giving the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. six months in which to stop drainage of its waste into the waters of Bogue. An account of the Monday mass meeting appears elsewhere in this issue.

The matter of taking an advertisement in a Mississippi magazine was brought up but a reference to the club minutes showed that this question had been voted down in a previous meeting.

The club voted to appropriate $10 to assist in paying the expenses of several home-seekers expected here from northern states.

The next meeting of the organization will be held Friday, Aug. 16.

REVIVAL AT PEA RIDGE

Bethel Church Will Have Week's Meeting.

Beginning next Sunday evening, Aug. 11, at eight o'clock and continuing through next week at the same hour daily, the Presbyterian Church at Pea Ridge will have a series of revival services. The preaching will be done by Rev. J. H. Holder, pastor of the Grenada Methodist church. Rev. R. L. McLeod, Jr., pastor of the Bethel Church, will lead in the singing.

A cordial invitation is extended everyone to attend any or all of the services.

A CORRECTION

In the article in The Sentinel last week about the supervisors ordering Ayer & Lord Tie Co. to stop the waste from its plant entering Bogue, it was stated that the order was introduced by Supervisor Whitaker, seconded by Supervisor Horton and that a roll call showed Whitaker, Smith and James, favoring its passage. Mattingly against its adoption. Immediately following it was said that Supervisor Smith was absent. The error, as it will be seen, was when it was said that Supervisor Smith favored passage of the order. Mr. Smith, who was absent from the special meeting referred to, was present Monday at the board meeting and introduced a motion to rescind the order.

The Sentinel regrets this typographical error and is glad to make this correction in justice to Mr. Smith.

SELLS ONE ACRE FOR $3000

J. J. Horton, former Grenadian, now living near Weslaco, Texas, in the lower Rio Grande valley, recently sold one acre of his twenty-eight acres of land there for $3000 cash. Mr. Horton has a well-developed citrus grove on his place and the advanced stage of its growth no doubt brought him such a handsome price.

Grenada is always interested in hearing of its former citizens and especially so when they are smiled upon by Dame Fortune.

"Onlooker" Gives Resume Of Events

Comments on Fight between Gov. Bilbo and Majority of Lower House. Bilbo's Promise to Appoint Three List He Named Doubtful by House Members Who Say He Failed to Keep Like Promise When Seeking $500,000 for Tick Eradication. Knox Impeachment Charges Bringing to Fore Many of State's Best Men Who Express Faith in Attorney General. Outcome Doubtful.

Grenada Sentinel:

The chief things, that are now in the mind of the Mississippi public are those pertaining to the legislative mill. The sparring between Gov. Bilbo and the majority of the lower house of the legislature, the report of the investigating committee named to inquire into the official conduct of Capt. Cecil Inman, brother-in-law of Ex-Gov. Dennis Murphree and ex-chairman of the state tax commission, and that of Attorney General Rush Knox are the stars now in the way of news, things your readers doubtless already have pretty well in mind. Nevertheless it may not be amiss for your correspondent to brief some few of the changing scenes in this political picture which are now being staged at the State Capital.

As a barometer of the attitude of the house towards still further attempting to enact road legislation, that body rejected Wednesday the bill it termed a "compromise" measure that originated with it and which was sent to the senate and passed after that body, as the house claimed, had changed and emasculated it beyond recognition. The house not only rejected the measure but refused a committee in conference with the senate because, as some of the leaders said, it is getting to be worse than child-like to hop from just one similar road measure to another. The insurmountable point of disagreement has been how the highway commissioners should be named; the house has stood for electing the commissioners by the people while the senate has insisted that Gov. Bilbo name them, and it has been repeatedly stated that the Governor has told many of his friends that he would veto any road bill that did not give him the right to appoint. So here you are. The people of Mississippi are sitting flat in the middle of the road while many thousands of dollars are being wasted by the counties in building more graveled roads.

Wednesday, Gov. Bilbo came before the house and in a personal message said that if the house would consent to a road bill giving him the authority to appoint the highway commissioners, he would name one of a certain number of successful business men of each supreme court district as a member of the commission, and he submitted a splendid list of names from which he said his

Love or Death

By Rafael Sabatini

The world is reading Sabatini and so may you. We have secured the above story from the pen of this talented Italian-Englishman, probably the most popular writer of the day, and equally at home in writing pure history or pure romance. It is a tale of the time when captains were also troubadours, expressing their hearts in song beneath the windows of dark-eyed beauties; when it was the custom, upon love or adventure bound, to go forth masked; when, two men meeting, it was a question whether plumed hats would be raised or swords would flash and when a gentleman without a dagger was not completely appalled for social occasions—a jolly old period which Sabatini knows so well how to reanimate.

DONALD WRIGHT ACCEPTS POSITION WITH RAILROAD

The many friends of Judge Donald S. Wright, of Greenwood, will be interested in knowing that he has tendered his resignation as county judge of Leflore county to accept a position with the legal department of the G. M. & N. R. Co. with headquarters at Mobile. Judge Wright will rank high as one of the road's attorneys.

Donald Wright, who is the son of Mrs. Genie Wright, of Grenada, is one of the many, fine young men born and reared in Grenada who have established themselves in the confidence and the esteem of other communities and who have gotten well along down the highway to success. He is a graduate of the literary and law schools of the University of Mississippi where he made a most enviable record in his studies. He volunteered for service in the World War and following his discharge he located in Greenwood for the practice of law. That he received such a splendid endorsement from the people of Leflore county in his race for the judgeship is an excellent index to how he is regarded there.

The Sentinel congratulates Judge Wright and hopes that he will continue to meet with even greater success in the future than he has in the past.

OUTLINE TERMITE CONTROL

Plant Board Says Does Not Require High Priced Experts.

A. & M. College, Miss., Aug. 7.—Replying to many letters and telephone calls during the past few days in regard to treating houses to prevent damage by termites, "flying ants," or "wood lice," the State Plant Board is sending bulletins and other information and advising home owners in all parts of Mississippi that the control of termites is a simple problem and does not require high priced experts.

In some sections of Mississippi, agents are charging exorbitant prices for treating houses with various expensive mixtures, but the Plant Board states that the most satisfactory material for this purpose is common coal tar creosote, which is much cheaper. The Plant Board offers the following suggestions to home owners who wish to treat their houses:

1. The first step is to find out where the termites are entering the building and cut off their connection with the ground. The termites left in the building will die as soon as they are cut from moisture of the soil. They usually enter buildings through temporary wooden supports, or in a good many cases they may build mud tunnels over the face of the concrete or brick foundation walls.
2. Clean out thoroughly all trash, chips, blocks or other wooden fragments under the house. Remove any temporary wooden supports and if necessary to replace, use lumber treated with two or three coats of coal tar creosote.
3. Scrape all of the mud tunnels or shelter tubes off the inside of the foundation walls.
4. Saturate the soil for about two feet from the inside of the foundation with kerosene, or a mixture of one part creosote and three kerosene. If the termites are generally distributed under the house in wooden blocks and other trash, it will be best to saturate the entire area under the house in order to kill them all. A sprinkler or a spray pump with a very coarse nozzle may be used for this work.
5. After these treatments it will probably pay to paint all the timber resting on the brick or concrete with two or three applications of coal tar creosote. This penetrates better if it is poured on or painted on with a full brush instead of merely glossing it over with a brush. Sufficient time should be allowed after each painting for the material to dry in before applying the next coat. A high grade of coal tar creosote can be secured from manufacturers in Mississippi at about 50c a gallon by the barrel.
6. In most cases more light and ventilation will probably be needed under the house, providing at least two square feet of opening for each 25 lineal feet of wall. These and all of the openings under the house should be covered with fine mesh (20 mesh) non-rusting screens.

More detailed information may be secured by writing the State Plant Board at A. and M. College.

A CORRECTION

In the advertisement of Friedman's Dry Goods Store in last week's Sentinel the two 21-piece luncheon sets advertised to go on sale Saturday, Aug. 3, at 4 p. m. for $10.00 should have been advertised at 10c instead of $10.00. The store sold one set last Saturday for 10c and another will be sold this Saturday at the same price. The Sentinel is glad to make this correction and regrets the error.

WINONA BEATS GRENADA

By winning over Grenada Wednesday afternoon by the score of 5 to 3, Winona took a one-game lead in the standing of the two teams in games played this summer. As The Sentinel goes to press the two teams are at battle on the local diamond. The game Wednesday was played in Winona.

Both teams Wednesday used imported pitchers, notwithstanding the impression one might get from the item about the game appearing in Thursday's Commercial Appeal. Smith, on the mound for Grenada, came from Memphis and Branson, who twirled for Winona, is from Meridian. He was one of A. and M. College's pitching aces.

Smith was taken out in the seventh inning and was relieved by McLeary.

Batteries: Winona—Brunson and Moss; Grenada—Smith, McLeary and Bingham.

Unloads His System Of Divers Matters

Tate Countian Punches Editor, Swats Bishop Cannon, Backs Rush Knox and Seems to Think Speaker Bailey Played Trick or Two. Pays His Usual Compliments to Bilbo.

Editor Sentinel:

I very much fear the editor of The Sentinel is headed towards some bad end the least of which will possibly be the cancellation of his membership in the great Methodist Church, South in which he has long taken pardonable pride, but I fear an edict of excommunication will issue from the Bishopric headed by that sainted priest of the Lord, Bishop James Cannon, Jr. whose name he has frequently taken in vain during the dog days now swiftly passing.

What if the worthy Bishop did do a little gambling through a New York "Bucket Shop" as compared to which a nigger crap game would have appeared like unto dressed up respectability? What if he did get his tail feathers either drawn out or very much rumpled in the transaction? What if he did during the World War buy and hoard a few hundred barrels of flour and hold on to it until the cows came home, or, in other words, until he had made and gathered in the sizable profit of $1300? What if he did use the funds of the Methodist Church to niggerize Old Virginia and pitch it headlong into the black Republican party? Weren't these funds entrusted to his care and hadn't he the right to do what he darned pleased with them? Certainly. Then what in the name of all the saints does the editor of The Sentinel want to get up on his hind legs and howl for? Dry up.

Been some curious things going down in Jackson that to a man who dwells in the sticks as does this writer have an unfair, cut and dried, sinister aspect. Mister Speaker Bailey, whose boast it is that he upset Mister Bilbo's "grave train," has the appointment of all the committees of that branch of the legislature of which he is the Speaker. As far as I know and believe in no case has he given the Bilbo forces a majority on any committee save that to investigate the acts of Captain Inman, late chairman of the State Tax Commission, and Attorney General Rush H. Knox. In this case he violated the rule and placed 5, a majority of Bilbo followers on that committee seeing which no intelligent looker on in Venice had any surmising to do as to what would be the report of that committee. Had Knox and Bailey's prospective candidacies for the governorship anything to do with the personnel of this committee? Stop and ask yourself the question, had it? No matter what the final outcome shall be it will I fear, result in the utter ruin of any ambition Knox may be harboring for further political preferment. One of the strongest rivals, Mister Speaker Bailey had or would have had in the coming race for governor is hors du combat. See.

I want here and now to express the feeling that I have always entertained, that no dirty money will stick to his hands, that his trial is the direct result of the unfair and outrageous political machinations of Mister Bilbo who hopes to be able to appoint Carl Marshall, or another of his tools, to Knox's office and thus gain back and more what he has lost in his fight with the legislature. In Knox's place at the end of his trial, no matter what the verdict is, I would take a willow switch and go the Governor's office, shake it at Bilbo and see him run, hunt up Carl Marshall, give him a strong punch in his solar plexus and a kick in the gable end of his pants, turn and ask Bailey, Mister Speaker Bailey, how he liked it and if he even indicated he didn't like it I would then and there administer such physical punishment as is made and provided in all such cases.

There now, I feel better.

LEFLORE BODY TAKES ACTION ON POLLUTION

Supervisors Address Letter to Ayer & Lord Saying Creosote Damages Fishing Industry in Yazoo River. Promise to Aid Authorities in Stopping Pollution.

Editor Sentinel:

"I enclose herewith copy of a letter which I have today addressed to the Ayer & Lord Tie Company of Tie Plant with reference to creosote and other timber treating waste flowing into Yazoo River from the plant of the Ayer & Lord Tie Company.

"The board of supervisors, instructed me to write this letter and send a copy to The Grenada Sentinel in order that the citizens of Grenada County may be fully advised in the premises and will not labor under a misapprehension that Leflore County is trying in any way to dictate the government of Grenada County, but as it is a mutual proposition it strikes the board of supervisors of this county that full cooperation should be given by it to the board of supervisors of Grenada County.

"I trust you will publish this letter as an official communication from the board of supervisors of this county to the citizen, of Grenada County.

"Very truly yours,

"Dear Sirs:

"The board of supervisors of Leflore County, at its regular August, 1929 meeting, instructed me to write you with reference to creosote waste and other timber treating waste being dumped into Bogue Creek in Grenada County and following that stream until it eventually reaches Leflore County where it does considerable damage to the fish in the Yazoo River. The attention of the Leflore County board of supervisors of this county has been called to an order of the board of supervisors of Grenada County and it is the sense of this board that the attitude of the board of supervisors of Grenada County is correct in the matter and it is the purpose of this board to exert every effort to see that this practice on the part of you is discontinued immediately.

"It is not the purpose nor the intent of the board of supervisors of this county to create any undue hardship on your concern, nor to interfere in any way with the regulations governing such things in Grenada County but it realizes that there is a method by which this creosote can be kept out of the water by you and unless done so that there are Federal statutes regulating such practices and would propose to bring those statutes into action if possible.

"You readily understand that fishing with nets is an industry as well as any other industry known and any action taken by any individual or concern which hinders that industry from being properly operated is against the welfare of any community and the citizens of Leflore County are considerably injured by the practice of allowing this creosote to flow into Yazoo River.

"I sincerely trust that you will advise me immediately your attitude in the matter and that it will not be necessary for the board of supervisors of Leflore County to take any further action.

ROTARY HEARS READINGS

Miss Elizabeth Goza, accomplished daughter of Mrs. G. R. Goza, entertained the Rotary Club at its luncheon Tuesday with two enjoyable musical readings. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Catherine Lufkin, who so frequently graciously assists the club in its programs.

C. H. Calhoun, secretary, gave a resume of June attendance records throughout the Rotary world and he made a plea to the local members to do their part in keeping the percentage up. He also called attention to the different articles in the August issue of The Rotarian, official publication of Rotary International, and urged that the magazine be read regularly.

General regret was expressed over the resignation of J. D. Dyre from the club. His resignation was tendered Tuesday and he has to be out of town so much he finds it impossible to keep up his attendance. As a parting gift to the club, he sent around a box of fine cigars which were passed around after the luncheon Tuesday.

Guests at the luncheon were Messrs. Frank Hays, of Memphis, John Worthington, of Coffeeville, and Claud Gibson, of Torrance.

"NOT HIGH HATTING"

The Sentinel is passing along to its readers the following extract from an article in the Winona Times of last week and it wants to know if Grenadians are going to stand for Winona to lord it over her. It's almost unthinkable for Winona to be mentioned in the same breath with Grenada but that it is being done and in a bragadocio and boastful way is evidenced by the Winona paper's article. What is Grenada going to do about it?

"Last Thursday night a crowd of sixty-five from Grenada's Methodist and Baptist Sunday schools drove down and enjoyed several hours swimming and skating. That makes it hard on Grenada people to say that Winona is a better town than Grenada for they have to come all the way down here to find a place so really and truly entertain their young people in a manner that is most enjoyable."

The above was taken from The Grenada Sentinel of July 26th.

Editor Lawrence shows that he has a mean spirit in him.

We are sorry that he was not a member of the happy party. A swim down here might wash away the jealousy he expressed. Winona is a good town; it is a progressive town; it has a number of places of amusements. Its entire citizenship rejoice when friends come and enjoy what we have with us.

We do not claim to be the only "Pebble in the Beach," and we want to assure our good friend Lawrence that we are not going to try and push Grenada off the beach, but want your splendid city to live on and on, and Winona will do what it can to add to the happiness and entertainment of your citizens whenever they will come down and fellowship with us.

Winona never "high hats" anybody. Winona is known far and wide as "The Friendly City," the city of gracious hospitality. We are proud of Winona, and never lose an opportunity to tell the world what Winona has to offer; our doors are flung wide open to those who wish to come and enjoy with us what we have to offer, and this includes our good friend Lawrence when he wishes to enjoy a good swim, skating, golfing, boating, tennis, hunting, fishing or even a good game of base ball. Whenever we want a QUIET evening we will return the call.—Winona Times.

We hope our friend, Leon Trotter, editor of the Winona Times and author of the above article, was not serious when he said we showed we had a mean spirit in us. It was not a spirit of meanness we manifested toward Winona but more a spirit of pity and tolerance that it should even attempt to compare itself to Grenada in any way. We are sure that all Grenadians feel the same way—the same feeling a big dog has when a little feist is yapping at his heels.

Folks like to go way back in the country when they go swimming. Maybe that's the reason so many Grenada people go to Winona where they can get the proper rural atmosphere while splashing about in the water.

Winona does play a good game of baseball but Grenada manages to more than hold her own in this sport. Winona High puts out good baseball and football teams during the school session but Grenada High teams generally send them to the cleaners.

Grenada sends its boys and girls to Winona to skate and swim. Winona sends its girls to Grenada College for a higher education than they can get at home. Grenada gives attention to the more serious side of life and then it devotes itself to the play and recreation side.

Editor Trotter is truthful when he says if he wants a "quiet" evening, he'll come to Grenada. He'd miss the screech of the Panama Limited's whistle which he hears every night as it passes through Winona—without stopping.

But if our Winona friend will come up and spend an evening with us we'll take him to the talking pictures and show him something to tell his people about.

PRESIDENT HOOVER SHOULD HAVE PLENARY POWER.

We hold to the doctrine of a strictly constitutional chief executive of this great country. But there is a more dominant sentiment today for beating spears into pruning hooks than ever before. The better thought of the leading nations is to cease building huge armaments, and to try to adjust differences as becoming men who hold to the faith and the teachings of Him who said, "Peace on earth, good will towards men". Hence there are times when it may be difficult to conduct diplomatic questions strictly within well defined constitutional limits.

The President knows more about the inner workings of the international mind than congress, therefore we would say that President Hoover should be given almost plenary power in making adjustments and laying plans to cut down war preparations. He might have violated the letter of the law, as we see some hold, when he ordered work suspended on the cruisers, now under construction with the hope that, in doing so, he would show to Great Britain that this country is willing to meet her halfway in the efforts to lay lasting foundations of peace—we say he may have broken the letter of the law but he most certainly acted in accordance with the spirit of the Nation. He acted after Premier MacDonald of Great Britain had made the proposition and after the Premier had taken similar steps over there.

We have our political parties; we differ among ourselves as to governmental policies, but 90 per cent of the true and tried men of the United States have always been willing to trust our Presidents in taking care of the interests of this country in dealing with nations across the waters. Certainly that sentiment is no less dominant today.

The interests of the American people in their relations with the peoples of other countries are safe in Hoover's hands. Thus we say that, just as far as possible, the President should be given a free hand in all his efforts to cease to get ready for war, which means that the young manhood of America shall cease to be sacrificed on bloody battlefields.

Who knows less about what the other is going to do than anybody else? Answer: The lower house of the Mississippi legislature and Gov. Bilbo.

LEARNED CHURCHMAN COMMENDS SENTINEL.

The Sentinel is in receipt of a letter, a part of which we are quoting below, from one of the South's most able and farseeing leaders. He is a man who occupies one of the highest positions his church can confer upon him, and is a great leader in spiritual matters. We might state that he is not a Methodist.

The letter was not written for publication, but there is such a multitude who are just watching the procession go by without apparently thinking what the procession means or whether it is headed, that it is doubly refreshing to get a message from a learned man who is seriously concerned about the general welfare and who has a grasp on conditions and problems as they confront the people of this great country, that we are constrained to pass what our correspondent says along to our readers.

The trend is now that "we must accept conditions as they are; to get in and ride if we can, if riding be only on the running board". The country is being told by the emissaries of those who hold the largest purse strings, "you must hush, otherwise you will frighten business", which is quite akin to the story of the man who was told that he must not pursue the bear which had attacked and wounded one of his little children.

"Once again", says our correspondent, "I am in your debt for the privilege of reading your editorial page in The Sentinel. You certainly conduct your work in a most strong and able manner."**

"There was never a time when sound and strong thinking was more needed. In these days of organized propaganda and scientific advertising, when all of the resources of psychology have been placed at the disposal of those who have something to put over, it is increasingly important that those who have the time and the ability to gather and digest the facts, give a confused people the benefit of their constructive thinking. Nothing short of this is going to save us from being the victims of designing and selfish propagandists and of the profit-loving users of the advertising art. I see, or think I see, the increasing menace of a highly commercialized civilization, based upon the worship of 'Prosperity'. We are sacrificing those people in our civilization—the rural folk and the middle class folk—who have always been the hope of any nation. Big business is in the saddle, and prosperity is our god, and 'a high standard of living' based only upon a material foundation, with greater comforts and pleasures as the test, is the bait that is being offered to the poor fish who are caught upon the golden hook and served up as a meal for the increasingly chosen few who are gathering into their hands the wealth of this country."

"We need leaders who consider the spiritual and moral factors in our civilization as of more ultimate importance than our mere material well-being. Such papers as yours can become elements in informing and guiding our people."

MEN NEEDED WITH THE STEADFASTNESS OF DANIEL.

The Bible story of Daniel was brought under review in the International Sunday School lesson of Sunday, July 28.

In thinking of Daniel and his steadfastness and his persistent refusal to renounce the teachings of his parents, though in a foreign land and among those who held in contempt the God he worshipped, the thought comes, "Would that our country had more men like Daniel at the present time, men who would not sell their birthright for gold, silver, position or power, and who would speak out for the religion they profess."

When there are so many in high places misusing sacred funds entrusted to their keeping; when there seems to be an ever increasing number who make politics a business rather than an act of patriotism, and when so many shocking things are happening; that the careless minded are heard to say, "You cannot trust any of them; they are all grafting", it is more than a pity that there are not more outstanding men of the Daniel type.

We believe in our fellowman. We think there are thousands of Daniels all over the land, yet it too often happens that the oily tongued Absaloms are preferred over the Daniels in public affairs as well as in many others.

There are dens of lions today into which upstanding men find that the avenues of life lead; and there are thousands who come out of these dens unharmed by the teeth of the lions. However, there is not enough of these in high place. Rather does it seem that the Daniels prefer the quiet retreats, those places where the lions are somewhat tamed and where they can hear the voice of Nature in all of its purity and perfecting tones.

Daniel's adherence to truth and right brought him into the favor of the king. It never fails to pay to stand on the eternal principles of justice, mercy and right. Daniel never confederated with the enemies of those back in the homeland; he remembered how he had been trained and he appreciated if he turned his back on his rearing that he was discrediting his progenitors and throwing overboard the only anchor that could save in time of storm.

The crying need of our country today is more Daniels in high places. Not more money makers or money getters but character builders, and those who will guard well the ark of the American covenant.

LIKE A CHICKEN WITH HEAD JUST CHOPPED OFF

If one who is compelled to meet the rugged side of life and who perforce through circumstances must live in the valleys will let his imagination carry him to a mountain top he will see much of humanity, and particularly of our American humanity, running hither and thither, for what they know not, like a chicken who has had his head chopped off preparatory to that attention which the head of the culinary department must give in the well regulated household.

We have "doctors" for every depression in business and for every malady of society. We have these quacks to kill the snakes, to make the grass grow, the cow to give milk, the pig to thrive, the hen to lay, the rooster to crow, to kill the boll weevil, to swat the fly, to save the hay, to show when and how to plough, to add to the maid's beauty and to increase the youth's smile—no not M. D.'s, but just those galivanting around over the country advertising themselves and goose stuffing about fifty per cent of man and womankind that they may have profit and the tutored experience thereby.

It is more than strange how easily people are horn-swoggled. We fall for the new and the short cuts. Barnum said one sucker was born every minute. He gave utterance to that statement somewhere about three quarters of a century ago, but it is just as true today. Most of us will jump at anything that we are told will bring us either dollars or doughnuts.

There are so many who head bureaus or commissions or who sit in swiveled chairs in offices behind electric fans whom the people who pay their salaries would absolutely forget if they did not write rigama-roles about "what is being done" in their bureaus or offices. They act the crank to the organ which makes the monkey dance. They grind out advice and experience which bear the odor of having been kept too long without ice. They generally do not even enjoy a thorough acquaintance with themselves and have scarcely mastered the alphabet of that about which they undertake to advise the public.

Yes, they send out "news"—propaganda that is worth about as much to the public as the flying of a buzzard over a beautiful flower garden is to the aroma of the flowers.

When we opened our mail Monday morning we found 8 pages of this putrid stuff which somebody was foolish enough to think we might read and whose brain cells were so like a vacuum that they thought we might publish.

PRESIDENT HOOVER SPEAKS THE HEART OF AMERICA.

President Hoover spoke the heart of America the other day when, immediately after the official announcement that the Kellogg Peace pact had been ratified by all nations to which it had been submitted, a ceremony took place in the presence of the representatives of 46 nations, he issued a statement suspending for the time being at least work on three cruisers. In this connection he said:

"Generally speaking, the British cruiser strength considerably exceeds American strength at the present time and actual construction of these three cruisers would not be likely in themselves to produce inequality in the final result."

"We do not wish, however, to have any misunderstanding of our actions and therefore we shall not lay those keels until there has been an opportunity for full consideration of their effect upon the naval agreement for parity which we expect to reach, although our hopes of relief from construction lie more largely in the latter years of the program under the law of 1928."

The President's act was a wise one. It shows good faith upon the part of the United States, and taken in connection with the action of England in curtailing similar war work, is more than significant.

The President was also right when he announced some days ago that there must be some curtailment of expenditures for the army. Of course the army lords rose in vigorous protest.

These do not want the soft jobs they are holding interfered with. Only about three years ago, when Admiral Magruder wrote articles dealing with the soft snaps in the navy, telling how many navy men were fighting battles of the sea sitting in easy chairs at Washington City, the wrath of the higher powers was visited on him. The higher-ups in both the army and the navy always want more and more money. But the time has arrived when this government should cease to throw away money on anything and when it should frown upon the idea of carrying two 44's and a rifle.

We commend the President for his farseeing and patriotic stand in these matters. He is thinking of the human side and not the glamor of war or the pomp of heraldry.

Among the states of the Union which showed increases in per capita wealth during the period from 1912 to 1927, Mississippi's percentage of increase was the eighth largest. In percentage of increase in bank deposits Mississippi ranked fourth.

And there is a tariff on automobiles and a proposition is before the senate finance committee to increase the rate. "Ain't that a mell of a come off"—a tariff on automobiles! Will the tolerance of the American masses last always? Henry Ford favors putting automobiles on the free list.

SICK AT HIS STOMACH

"I WAS suffering from stomach trouble in 1917," says Mr. C. K. Nelson, a railroad engineer living in Pulaski, Va. "I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet I suffered on just the same. When in West Virginia on a work train, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I could not stand to work in my condition. Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work."

Insects are raised in incubators at the FLY-TOX factory. When they are fully grown and especially strong and lively they are turned loose in a test cabinet, "The Fly-Tox Chamber of Death". Less than a teaspoonful of FLY-TOX is sprayed inside. Within five minutes all are dead. But, the test isn't finished yet. The dead insects are carefully taken from the "Chamber of Death" and put gently into incubators. They remain there 24 hours in an effort to revive them. If even a wing flutters, the FLY-TOX tested does not come up to the high standard of quality, and never leaves the factory. This is the quick acting insect spray you want. It is FLY-TOX. Accept no substitutes. There is nothing just as good. There is only one FLY-TOX. Developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Research Fellowship. Every bottle guaranteed.—Adv.

Column About Colored People of Grenada County

Items by J. H. Phillips

The death of Mr. Thad Hankins, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the eastern section of the county, brought sorrow and sadness to a large group of relatives and friends. He was near 90 years of age and during his life time was active in everything that was for the advancement of his race. He had not been sick, the burden of years had checked the machinery of life and he simply laid aside life's activities to lay down to peaceful dreams. He was the father of a large family, ten boys, and three girls, all grown with families, some of them being leaders in their communities. We share with the family in grief over the departure of this good man.

Mrs. Daisy Carter, of Sardis, sister of J. H. Phillips, motored down to the City Beautiful to visit for a week or more. She enjoys being in Grenada and thinks we have a lovely town. We are glad to have her here.

Prof. J. H. Ramsey, president of the M. I. College, Holly Springs, passed through Grenada and was the guest of Prof. A. M. Rogers of this city.

The Community Needy circle met at the home of Mrs. A. M. Rogers last Monday evening and listened to an address by Mrs. W. D. Salmon. "Beautiful that Based on Love" was enjoyed by all present.

Mr. A. H. Henderson, farm demonstrator, left last Sunday morning for Piney Wood school to be present Monday morning at the opening of the annual session of the boys' training school. He carried with him 4 or 5 of the boys of this county. These opportunities offered our boys in club work should not be viewed lightly, because of the information they receive to assist them in the development of better ideas of carrying their efforts to success.

Last Sunday at 11 a. m. Mr. E. D. Brooks, with his wife, loaded us for a trip to Sweet Home Church, seven miles, southwest of Grenada. Prof. Rogers and Bolden thought the route was more like a snake preparing for a battle than an established road, however, Mr. Brooks was so familiar with it that he made the curves with a speed that the crook did not seem bad. Sweet Home community is the community in which Mr. Brooks and his good wife have spent the best years of their life and they are justly proud of it. Our mission was in the interest of the Old Folks home—to get a local asso-

DANIEL AMONG THE LIONS

LESSON TEXT—Daniel 6:1-23. GOLDEN TEXT—The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them. PRIMARY TOPIC—Daniel is True to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Daniel Is True to God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Meaning of True Courage.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Courage of Faith.

I. Daniel the Prime Minister of the Medo-Persian Empire (vv. 1-13). Sterling worth brought him to the front and kept him there. The king was keen to discern his worth and to give it recognition.

II. An Occasion Sought Against Daniel (vv. 4-9).

1. The reason for (v. 4). No doubt that which prompted this effort was envy and jealousy.

2. Failure of (v. 4).

Daniel's official record was blameless. They could not even find an error. Envy is still in the world. Those who excel in any line are sure to suffer in some way for their excellencies. The successful business man in relation to his competitors, the ranking pupil in school, the child of superior merit in the home, will be envied by the others. In politics many times those who honestly strive to do their duty are persecuted. Even in the church itself we find that ministers are sometimes envious of their superiors.

3. The wicked plot (vv. 5-9).

They trumped up a charge on the ground of his foreign religion. They were not careful about their method, so their end was attained. In spite of Daniel's loyalty, the decree was signed by the king which would put him into the den of lions.

III. Daniel's Noble Confession (vv. 10-13).

Though Daniel knew that the wicked decree was signed, he knelt before God as usual. Note the silence of heroism. Weak men bluster; strong men have little to say.

1. He continued his usual habit (v. 10).

He knew that the civil law had absolutely nothing to do with his religion. God's law is first. Laws forbidding reading the Bible, praying, or meeting to worship God, have no authority over men.

2. Daniel reported to the king (vv. 11-13).

These wicked men watched to find out whether Daniel would pray before his God, and when they found that he continued his worship, they went to the king and reported that Daniel disregarded his decree.

IV. The Foolish Decree Executed (vv. 14-17).

1. The king displeased with himself (v. 14).

He labored till the going down of the sun to deliver Daniel, conscious that he had been entrapped.

2. The king helpless (v. 15).

The proud ruler found that he was a slave. To enact laws which change not is the height of folly.

3. Daniel cast into the den of lions (v. 16).

The king's parting word to Daniel was a poor, feeble excuse for his guilty conscience.

4. The double seal (v. 17).

This double sealing shows the king's purpose to abide by the unfortunate law.

V. Daniel Delivered (vv. 18-23).

1. Note the contrast between the night in the lion's den and the one in the palace. In the palace there was no sleep, no mirth. Daniel's quiet is as a picture of the safety and peace which are the portion of those who trust God and do His will.

2. The king's question in the morning (v. 20).

3. Daniel's answer (v. 22).

God's angel has done many wonderful works. The early Christians despised bonds, stripes and death.

4. Daniel delivered (v. 23).

No manner of hurt was found because he believed in his God.

VI. The Doom of His Accusers (v. 24).

They were cast into the den of lions and for ever they came at the bottom of the den their bones were broken in pieces. Daniel's enemies go into the same trap which they prepared for him.

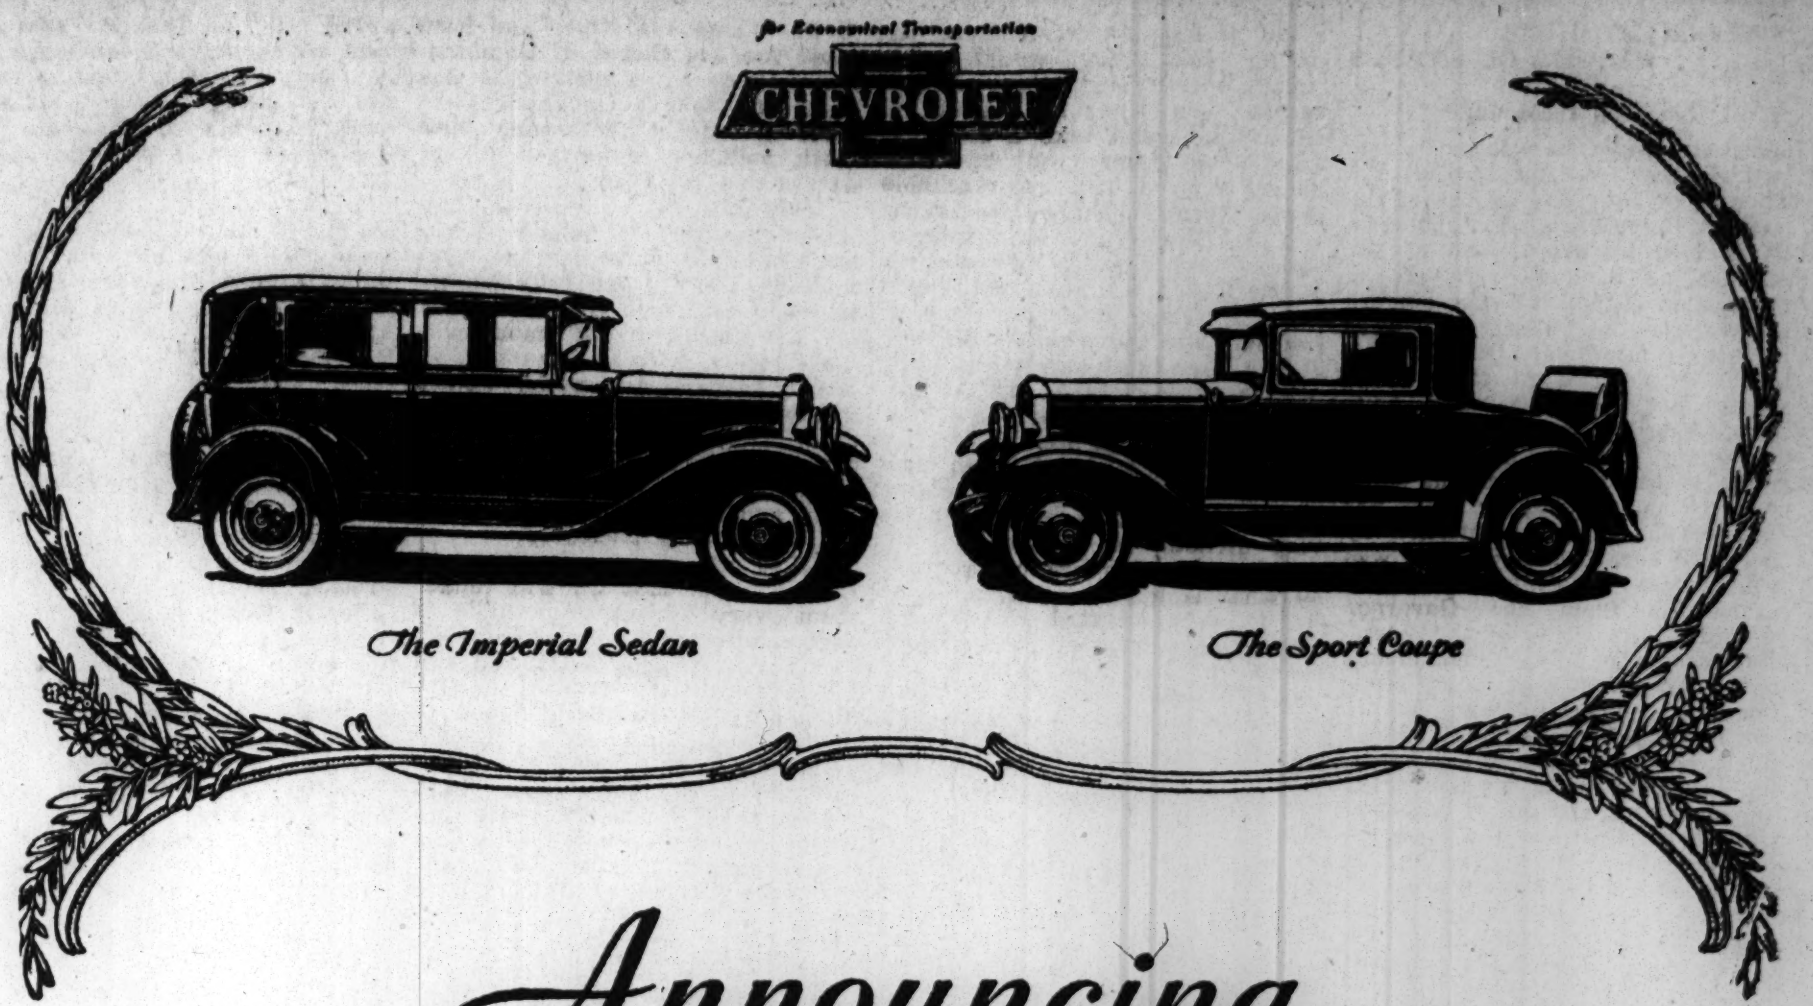

VII. Darius' Decree (vv. 25-27). Men were to tremble and fear before Daniel's God. As to whether Darius had a change of heart we do not know.

VIII. Daniel's Prosperity (v. 28). Daniel goes higher into the kingdom and continues in his place of honor even though dynasties change.

They express delight at having the privilege of speaking to our group. The messages that each one of them brought to us were appropriate and highly edifying.

“ONLOOKER” GIVES RESUME OF EVENTS

selection would be made. From your district, he named Col. Tol Thomas, of your city as one of the possible appointees. Mr. Thomas, as is well known, is one of the outstanding business men of the state and is one of the leading bankers of the South, and were he named, he would put a driving power in road work that would startle perhaps many who have been “hanging on to jobs”. But the guess is that Mr. Thomas would decline the place. The same could be said of a very large percent of the others mentioned by the Governor. The legislature was looking for something like this proposition from the Governor yesterday, but many of those who have shown a lack of confidence in the Governor said in anticipation of his pledge to name certain men if given the power to appoint. “Well, he made the same proposition last year when he was seeking an appropriation of $500,000 for tick eradication in the southern counties, yet, after the bill was passed, he failed to live up to his promise; he did not name a single man he promised”. Your correspondent just at this moment does not remember about this and can not say as to whether or not the Governor is improperly charged.

The house has the biggest and most serious thing that has been before that body for years and that is the impeachment charges against Rush Knox. Whether or not the house will vote to sustain the report of the committee is the question now. The tide is in favor of the Attorney General ebb and flows. Charges and counter charges, of politics and machinations fill the air. Some assert that some of the members of the house are trying to get General Knox where he cannot run for Governor, and in this connection, the charge involves some of those regarded as his political friends. Others are saying that back of the whole business is the scheme of Gov. Bilbo and his friends to get Knox out of the way so that Bilbo can name his successor and therefore get control of bond sales and numerous other things. It is asserted that but for General Knox, Gov. Bilbo would have sold some bonds some months ago whereby the state would have lost $100,000. Some of the extreme partisans of Gen. Knox are saying that the committee was biased against him. But this as “Onlooker” gets it, is an error. Hon. Dan McGeehee, chairman of the investigating committee, is not regarded as a “Bilbo man”, in fact it is certainly well known that in the first primary in 1927, he did not vote for Bilbo. Those best posted say that the committee stood 5 to 4 against the present state administration.

Some of the house members are saying that they would more readily vote to sustain the charges against Gen. Knox if they at the same time could take a crack at Capt. Cecil Inman, but his term having expired, he is not reachable except through the courts. What will be done with the charges against Gen. Knox is only a guess at the best at this moment. He is a good fighter and has some of the best and most high class men of the state who assert that they believe in his honor and official integrity and who have said that they are going to stand with him to the last ditch, and when men of this class put their shoulders to the wheel, they make a force very difficult to overcome.

Political states are being made by what is happening here. Gov. Bilbo, it is asserted by many, should have a very kindly sympathy for Gen. Knox because the record is that the house voted impeachment charges against him in 1910 and that the senate only lacked one vote of furnishing the two-thirds majority to hurl him from office.

pressed at the mass meeting, toward Ayer & Lord Tie Co. and his motion, after being seconded, was adopted without a dissenting voice. He and Dr. Countiss were named to prepare the resolutions. The resolutions, suggested by Mr. Perry, follow: “We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions on behalf of a mass meeting of the citizens of Grenada County held in the court house at 10 a. m. this day, to consider the alleged pollution of streams, especially the Yalobusha River, by waste matter from plant of Ayer & Lord Tie Co., beg leave to submit the following: “Whereas, the interest in this matter was shown by closing the stores of Grenada, and the meeting was attended by nearly all the business men of the community, and from all sections of Grenada County; “And whereas, it was declared a matter of history for 25 years that the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. had always complied with all orders of the Board of Supervisors in trying to prevent the pollution of the streams, and to carry out any and all lawful and reasonable orders and suggestions; “And whereas it is recognized by this meeting that our Supervisors are not inimical to the Tie Plant, but have acted in good faith to the best of their judgment in trying to compose differences arising in complaint, from their constituents and the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. in justice to all concerned; “And whereas it appeared that no recent analysis of the waters of the Yalobusha River had been made for the Board of Supervisors or under its direction; it was suggested that such analysis be made in order to determine how much pollution is caused by the waste from Tie Plant; “Therefore be it resolved, that this committee on behalf of the mass meeting convey to the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. the high regard we have for their Grenada plant, and the character of men who make up the local organization. We appreciate the added wealth it brings in its permanent investment here, the value it gives to our low grade timber lands, the employment it gives to our citizens, and last the taxes they pay into the county treasury; “That we assure the Ayer & Lord Tie Co. that we will render them every assistance possible to correct any troubles or misunderstandings that may exist, and will be patient and careful to give them time to remedy as much of it as may be practicable; “Resolved, last, that we entertain for them the same high regard that we did 25 years ago when they were invited to invest in our county, and we renew the invitation that they remain with us for 25 years longer, pledging them our sympathy and cooperation.”

A committee consisting of J. H. Oliver, H. K. Barwick, J. T. Keeton, A. T. McElwath and Dr. J. R. Countiss was named to confer with the supervisors. This committee appeared before the board Monday afternoon but a motion to rescind the order lost by a vote of three to two, Supervisor Mattingly and Smith voting to rescind, and Supervisors Whitaker, Horton and James voting to let the order stand. The board agreed, however, to visit Tie Plant Tuesday and look over the situation there.

GRENADA ANTI CAMPAIGN PROVED SUCCESSFUL

The Argentine anti campaign conducted in Grenada last fall with the assistance of the State Plan. Board has been very successful, according to N. L. Douglas, plant board inspector with headquarters in this city, who recently investigated the situation here. Mr. Douglas visited 12 homes in the infested area all of which reported that no ants had been seen since the campaign last fall. Very few ants could be found and he states that it should be easily possible to eradicate this pest completely if the fight is kept up.

An investigation of many complaints of ants, showed that they were no Argentine ants but the native species that are returning to their territory from which the Argentine ants drove them out. Mr. Douglas finds that in most cases the fire ant, or common stinging ant, is causing most of the trouble. This ant prefers meats or greasy foods and he advises a bait made of 1 part sodium arsenite, 40 parts pure hog lard, and 40 parts wheat bran or corn meal. Good results have also been secured by using baits of meat skins or greasy bones dusted with tartar emetic and placed where the ants can get them. In most cases these baits should be placed in small tin cans with hole, punched in them in order to keep cats and dogs from getting the poisoned bait. These ants nest in the ground usually, and where it is possible to dig up their nests, and saturate with kerosene or boiling water, this method will probably be more satisfactory than an attempt to poison them.

Blues Lose to Reds.

The members of the Susie Trotter Sunday School class of the Baptist church have just concluded an interesting campaign for new members. Mrs. Will Martin is the teacher and Mrs. Sam Simmons, president of the class. It was divided into two groups, the Reds and the Blues. Mrs. E. T. Sweeney was captain of the Reds and Mrs. E. L. Betz, of the Blues. Much interest was displayed throughout the contest and both sides did splendid work, making a number of additions to the class. The Reds, however, came out victorious, so in accordance with previous plans, the Blues tendered a party in their honor last Thursday afternoon from 5 until 7.

The Masonic Temple, which was the scene of the lovely affair, was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, carrying out the red and blue color scheme. It was also attractively carried out in the delicious cream and cake with which the guests were served.

Miss Woodson Hostess.

Miss Lillian Woodson complimented her attractive guest, Miss Ruth Porter, of Hickory Valley, Tenn., with a three table bridge party Wednesday morning.

Two young people loving each other, each unsuspecting the other's affection, go their separate ways. The fate which divides them conspires for awhile to offer them the promise of happiness, then erects barriers, but ultimately brings them together under circumstances attended by great danger.

Rafael Sabatini

Obstacles might be dissolved if the man would declare his love, but to do so would not only compromise both the position and welfare of the woman. Whether love or death shall win is the question; a problem which always has presented a fascinating theme for romance and which fits so well into the place and period—Italy of the late fifteenth century—which Sabatini knows how to revivify better than any other writer. In the background is the powerful Cesare Borgia, the great figure of the one of the best of the rulers or one of the world's most colossal villains—whichever historians have never been able exactly to classify. In this story he is shown as one of consummate ability and with an almost uncanny faculty for bending people to his will and making their motives and desires serve his own purposes and ambitions. Even the plight of the lovers is made to serve a Borgia stratagem, very amiably, gracefully and satisfactorily, as the story reveals.

Rafael Sabatini, born in Italy of an Italian father and English mother, and educated principally in Switzerland and Portugal, has long been a resident of England and a writer in the language of that country. He is one of the most charming writers of the day and popular with all classes of readers. He is unique in the fact that he can write either history or romance with equal facility. While recognized by scholars as an excellent historian, the great body of the public knows him best through his splendidly romantic novels. Most of these, notably "The Sea Hawk," "Scaramouche," and "Captain Blood," have been immensely popular in America. Sabatini has also gained fame as a playwright.

CHAPTER I

IN THAT shrewd chapter of his upon a prince's choice of ministers of which I shall presently have more to say—Messer Niccolò Machiavelli discovers three degrees in the intelligence of mankind. To the first belong those who understand things for themselves by virtue of their own natural endowments; to the second those who have at least the wit to discern what others understand; and to the third those who neither understand things for themselves nor yet through the demonstrations which others afford them. The first are rare and excellent, since they are the inventive and generative class; the second are of merit, since if not actually productive, they are at least reproductive; the third being neither the one nor the other, but mere parasites who prey for their existence—and often profitably—upon the other two, are entirely worthless.

There is yet a fourth class which the learned and subtle Florentine appears to have overlooked, a class which combines in itself the attributes of those other three. In this class I would place the famous Corvinus Trismegistus, who was the very oddest compound of inventiveness and stupidity, or duplicity and simplicity, of deceit and credulity, of guile and innocence, of ingenuity and ingenuousness, as you shall judge.

To begin with, Messer Corvinus Trismegistus had mastered—as his very name implies—all the secrets of nature, of medicine and of magic, so that the fame of him had gone out over the face of Italy like a ripple over water.

He knew, for instance, that the oil of scorpions captured in sunshine, during the period of Sol in Scorpio—a most essential condition this—was an infallible cure for the plague. He knew that to correct an enlargement of the spleen, the certain way was to take the spleen of a goat, apply it for four-and-twenty hours to the affected part, and thereafter expose it to the sun. In a measure as the goat's spleen should desiccate and wither, in such measure should the patient's be reduced and restored to health. He knew that the ashes of a wolf's skin never failed as a remedy for baldness, and that to arrest bleeding at the nose nothing could rival an infusion from the bark of an olive tree, provided the bark were taken from a young tree in the case of a young patient, and from an old tree in the case of an old patient. He knew that serpents stewed in wine, and afterward eaten, would make sound and whole a leper, by conferring upon him the serpent's faculty of changing its skin.

Deeply, too, was he versed in poisons and enchantments, and he made no secret—so frank and open was his nature—of his power to conjure spirits and, at need, to restore the dead to life. He had discovered an elixir vitae that preserved him still young and vigorous at the prodigious age of two thousand years, which he claimed to have attained; and another elixir, called Aqua Celeste—a very complex and subtle distillation this—that would reduce an old man's age by fifty years, and restore to him his lost youth.

All this and much more were known to Corvinus the Thrice-Mage, although certain folk of Sordania had sought to show that the sum of his knowledge concerned the extent to which he could abuse the credulity of his contemporaries and render them his dupes. Similarly it was alleged—although his adherents set it down to spite and envy that the great must forever be provoking in the mean—that his real name was just Pietro Corvo, a name he got from his mother, who kept a winery in Forlì, and who could not herself with any degree of precision have named his father. And these deriders added that his having lived two thousand years was an idle vaunt, since there were still many alive who remembered to have seen him as an ill-kempt, dirty urchin wallowing in the kennels of his native town.

Be all that as it may, there is no denying that he had achieved a great and well-deserved renown, and that he waxed rich in his mean dwelling in Urbino—that Italia Atene, the cradle of Italian art and learning. And to wax rich in, after all, considered by many to be the one outward sign of inward grace, the one indubitable proof of worth. To them, at least, it follows that Messer Corvinus was worthy.

This house of his stood in a narrow street behind the Oratory of San Giovanni, a street of crazy buildings that leaned across to each other until, had they been carried a little higher, they must have met in a Gothic arch, to exclude the slender strip of sky which, as it was, remained visible.

It was a quarter of the town admirably suited to a man of the magician's studious habits. The greater streets of Urbino might tremble under the tramp of armed multitudes in those days when the Lord Cesare Borgia, duke of Valentinois and Romagna, was master of the city, and the peaceful, scholarly Duke Guidobaldo a fugitive outcast. Down that narrow, ill-paved gap of sordid dwellings came no disturbers of the peace. So that Corvinus Trismegistus was left to pursue his studies unmolested, to crush his powders and distill his marvelous elixirs.

Thither to seek his help and his advice came folk from every quarter of Italy. Thither in the first hour of a fair night, about a fortnight after Cesare Borgia's occupation of Urbino, came, attended by two grooms the Lady Bianca de' Fioravanti. This Lady Bianca was the daughter of that famous Fioravanti who was Lord of San Leo, the only fortress in Guidobaldo's territory which, emboldened by its almost impregnable position, still held out in defiance of the irresistible Valentinois.

With much had heaven blessed Madonna Bianca. Wealth was hers and youth, and a great name; culture and a beauty that has been the subject of some songs. And yet, with all these gifts, there was still something that she lacked—something without which all else was vain; something that brought her by night, a little fearfully to the grim house of Messer Corvinus as a suppliant. To attract the lost attention she came on foot and masked, and with no more attendance than just that of her two grooms. As they entered the narrow street she bade one of them extinguish the torch he carried. Thereafter, in the dark, they had come, although groping, stumbling on the rough kidney stones, to the magician's door.

"Go knock, Taddeo," she bade one of her servants.

And on her words there happened the first of those miracles by which Madonna Bianca was to be convinced beyond all doubting of the supernatural quality of the powers that Messer Corvinus wielded. Even as the servant took his first step toward the door, this opened suddenly, apparently of itself, and in the passage appeared a stately, white-robed Nubian bearing a lantern. This he now raised, so that its yellow shafts showered their light upon Madonna and her followers. There was, of course, no miracle in that. The miracle lay in another apparition. In the porch itself, as if materialized suddenly out of the circumambient gloom, stood a tall, cloaked figure, black from head to foot, the face black concealed under a black visor. This figure bowed, and waved Madonna onward into the house.

She drew back in fear; for, having come to a place of wonders, expecting wonders, she accounted it but natural that wonders she should find, and it never entered her mind to suppose that here was but another who sought Corvinus, one who had arrived ahead of her, and in response to whose earlier knock it was that the door had opened. Just a courteous gentleman who stood now deferring to her sex and very obvious importance.

Devoutly she crossed herself, and observing that the act did not cause this black familiar—as she supposed him—to dissolve and vanish, she reflected that at least his origin could not be demonic, took courage and went in, for all that her knees shook under her as she passed him.

The supposed familiar followed close upon her heels, the grooms came last, together and something cowed, though they were men she had chosen for the stoutness of their courage. The gloom, the uncanny gentleman in black, the grinning Nubian, all teeth and eyeballs, affected them unpleasantly.

The Nubian closed the door and barred it, the metal ringing shrilly as it fell. Then he faced about to ask them formally what and whom they sought. It was the lady who answered, unmasking as she spoke.

"I am Bianca de' Fioravanti, and I seek the very learned Messer Corvinus Trismegistus."

The Nubian bowed silently, bade her follow, and moved down the long stone passage, his lantern swinging as he went, and flinging its yellow disk of light to and fro upon the grimy walls. Thus they came to a stone, oaken door studded with great nails of polished steel, and by this into a bare anteroom. There were dried rushes on the floor, a wooden bench was set against the wall, and upon a massive four-legged table stood an oil lamp, whose rudely, quivering flame, shedding in a penumbra of black smoke, shed a little light and a deal of smell.

The guide waved a brown hand toward the bench.

"Your lackeys may await your excellency here," said he.

She nodded, and briefly gave her order to the grooms. They obeyed her, though with visible reluctance. Then the Nubian opened a second door, at the chamber's farther end. He drew aside a heavy curtain, with a starting crash of metal rings, and disclosed what seemed at first no more than a black gap.

"The dread Corvinus Trismegistus bids you enter," he announced. For all the stoutness of her spirit the Lady Bianca now drew back. But as her eyes remained fixed upon the gap, she presently saw the gloom in part dispelled, and dimly she began to perceive some of the furnishings of that inner room. She took courage, bethought her of the great boon she sought, at the magician's hands, and so crossed the dread threshold and passed into the mysterious chamber.

After her, in close attendance, ever silent, came the gentleman of the mask. Believing him to be of the household of the mage, and his attendance a necessary condition, she made no demur to it; whilst the Nubian, on the other hand, supposing him, from his mask and richness of his cloak, to be her companion, made no attempt to check his ingress.

Thus, together, these two passed into the dim twilight of the room. The curtains rasped together again behind them and the door clanged sepulchral.

Madonna peered about her, her breath shortened, her heart beating unduly. A line of radiance along the ceiling, mysterious of source, very faintly revealed her surroundings to her: three or four chairs, capacious and fantastically carved, a table of plain wood against the wall immediately before her, crowded with strange vessels of glass and metal that gleamed as they were smitten by rays of the faint light. No window showed. From ceiling to floor the chamber was hung with black draperies; it was cold and silent as the tomb, and of the magician there was no sign.

The eeriness of the place increased her awe, trammeled her reason, and lowered her imagination. She sat down to await the advent of the dread Corvinus. And then the second miracle took place. Chancing to look around in quest of the black familiar who had materialized to escort her, she discovered to her infinite amazement, that he had vanished. As mysteriously as he had first taken shape in the porch before her eyes, had he now dissolved again and melted away into the all-encompassing gloom.

She caught her breath at this, and then, as if something had still been needed to scatter what remained of her wits, a great pillar of fire leaped suddenly into being in midchamber, momentarily to blind her and to wring from her a cry of fear. As suddenly it vanished, leaving a stench of sulphur in the air; and then a voice, deep, booming and immensely calm, rang in her ears:

"Fear not, Bianca de' Fioravanti, I am here. What do you seek of me?"

The poor, overwrought lady looked before her in the direction of the voice, and witnessed the third miracle.

Gradually before her eyes, where there had been impenetrable gloom—where, indeed, it had seemed to her that the chamber ended in a wall—she saw a man, an entire scene, gradually assume shape and being as she watched. Nor did it occur to her that it might be her eyesight's slow recovery from the blinding flash of light that conveyed to her this impression of gradual materialization. Soon it was complete—in focus, as it were, and quite distinct.

She beheld a small table or pulpit upon which stood a gigantic open tome, its leaves yellow with a great age, its colossal silver clasps gleaming in the light from the three beams of a tall-stemmed bronze lamp of ancient Greek design, in which some aromatic oil was being burned. At the lamp's foot a human skull grinned horribly. To the right of the table stood a tripod supporting a brazier in which a mass of charcoal was glowing ruddily. At the table itself, in a high-backed chair, sat a man in a scarlet gown, his head covered by a hat like an inverted saucer. His face was lean and gaunt, the nose and cheekbones were prominent; his forehead was high and narrow, his red beard bifurcated, and his eyes, which were turned full upon his visitor, reflecting the cunningly set light, gleamed with an uncanny penetration.

Behind him, in the background, stood crucible and alembic, and above these an array of shelves laden with phials, coffers and retorts. But of all this she had the most fleeting and subconscious impressions. All attention of which she was capable was focused upon the man himself. She was, too, as one in a dream, so bewildered had her senses grown by all that she had witnessed.

"Speak, Madonna," the magician calmly urged her. "I am here to do your will."

It was encouraging, and would have been still more encouraging, had she but held some explanation of the extraordinary manner of his advent. Still overawed, she spoke at last, her voice unsteady.

"I need your help," said she. "I need it very sorely."

"It is yours, Madonna, to the entire extent of my vast science."

"You—you have great learning?" she half-questioned, half-affirmed.

"The limitless ocean," he answered modestly, "is neither so wide nor so deep as my knowledge. What is your need?"

She was mastering herself now; and if she faltered still and hesitated it was because the thing she craved was not such as a maid may boldly speak of. She approached her subject gradually.

"You possess the secret of great medicines," said she, "of elixirs that will do their work not only upon the body, but at need upon the very spirit?"

"Madonna," he answered soberly, "I can arrest the decay of age or compel the departed spirit of the dead to return and restore the body's life. And since it is Nature's law that the greater must include the less, let that reply suffice you."

"But can you—" She paused. Then, impelled by her need, her last fear forgotten now that she was well embarked upon the business, she rose and approached him. "Can you command love?" she asked, and gulped. "Can you compel the cold to grow impassioned, the indifferent to be filled with longings? Can you—can you do this?"

He pondered her at some length. "Is this your need?" quoth he, and there was wonder in his voice. "Yours or another's?"

"It is my need," she answered low. "My own."

He sat back and further considered the pale beauty of her, the low brow, the black, lustrous tresses in their golden net, the splendid eyes, the alluring mouth, the noble height and shape.

"Magic I have to do your will at need," he said slowly; "but surely no such magic as Nature's own endowment of you. Can he resist the sorcery of those lips and eyes—this man for whose subjection you desire my aid?"

"Alas! He thinks not of such things. His mind is set on war and armaments. His only mistress is ambition."

"His name," quoth the sage imperiously. "What is his name—his name and his condition?"

She lowered her glance. A faint flush tinged her cheeks. She hesitated, taken by a fluttering panic, yet she dared not deny him the knowledge he demanded, lest, vexed by her refusal, he should withhold his aid.

"His name," she faltered at length, "is Lorenzo Castrocara—a gentleman of Urbino, a condottiero who serves under the banner of the duke of Valentinois."

"A condottiero blind to beauty, blind to such warm loveliness as yours, Madonna?" cried Corvinus. "So anomalous a being, such a human nature will require great medicine." (To Be Continued.)
